

GDPR Policy

The information we have about our customers will only be used in connection with the services we provide at Happy Garden Hens. We will not hand any of your information over to any third parties or use it for marketing purposes.

Under the Data Protection Act 1998, you can ask us to remove your personal information from our systems at any time. To do this, you must contact us in writing and provide suitable proof of identification. However, please be aware that your 'Right to be Forgotten' does not apply to data which must be held according to other pieces of legislation. For example, you cannot ask us to destroy information pertaining to purchases during the past seven years.

If you are concerned that the information we keep is out of date, please contact us in writing to update this information.

This policy may be changed, please monitor this to learn of any updates.